REFLECTION:

Female Genital Cosmetic Surgery (FGCS) refers to non-medically indicated cosmetic surgical procedures that change the structure and appearance of the healthy external genitalia of women, or internally in the case of vaginal tightening. This definition includes the most common procedure, labiaplasty, as well as others, such as hymenoplasty and vaginoplasty, also known as vaginal reconstruction and vaginal rejuvenation.

According to figures from Medicare, the number of women undergoing medicare-billed vulvoplasty or labiaplasty in Australia has increased from 640 in 2001 to more than 1500 in 2013, an increase of 140%.
